

Beasley Reece

Beasley Reece has had a varied and eclectic professional life. He came out of North Texas State University as a Defensive Back and began his pro career with the Dallas Cowboys as a Wide Receiver in 1976. He moved on to the New York Giants in 1977 as a DB and played there until 1983. He finished his NFL career with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers playing there in 1983 & 1984. During his career, he was a Free Safety, Strong Safety, Wide Receiver, Punt Returner & Kick Returner. He has continued to excel at many different things throughout his other career stages.

Beasley went into the media after his playing career and worked for both NBC & CBS as an NFL color analyst. He has also served as Sports Director for television stations in Hartford, Tampa and Philadelphia and even was an analyst for the 1992 & 1996 Summer Olympics.

Now Reece is excelling in a third career; he is in high demand as a motivational speaker, master of ceremonies and auctioneer. In this function, Beasley has worked hundreds of events, entertaining listeners with great stories from the football field, the locker room and the news station. He has worked with some of the biggest names in sports, entertainment and politics. If that weren't enough, he also plays the piano and sings and has performed the national anthem at NBA & NFL games and at the Olympics.

Reece's addresses are high-energy and inspirational as he has learned under master motivators such as Mike Ditka, Tom Landry, Bill Parcells, and Dan Reeves, amongst others. Beasley was baptized at Toliver Missionary Baptist Church in Waco, Texas. He served as the youth ministry pianist, learned to love Christ in that church & believes that every thought and every decision should be made through prayer.
