

David Fulcher

David Fulcher was born and raised in Los Angeles, California and received both football and baseball scholarships to Arizona State University. During his career at Arizona State, he began as a Wide Receiver, then after requesting a shift to Defensive Back, he earned the coveted award of Standout Player at that position.

David's nickname, "Fo-Rock" was placed on him by his teammates after their game with Colorado State, where his teammates said he hit one player, "like a rock!" The nickname obviously stuck and stayed with him even to this day. While at Arizona State, David won All American honors three consecutive years. In November of 1996, he received the honor of being inducted into the Arizona State University Hall of Fame for his outstanding college career. David was drafted by the Cincinnati Bengals in 1986 in the third round and went on to become known as one of the NFL's largest, fastest, hardest hitting, and best Strong Safeties during his career. He was named to three consecutive Pro Bowl Games ('89, '90, and '91), made All-Pro teams in 1988, '89, and '90. In the Bengal's 1989 Super Bowl year, he was named Defensive Back of the Year for the NFL - an outstanding, well-earned honor after a storybook season for the team.

Fulcher led the Cincinnati Bengals in tackles in 1991 with 95 - 68 of those tackles were solo. He led his team with 4 pass interceptions and 4 fumble recoveries. In David's six seasons with the Cincinnati Bengals, he accounted for 561 tackles - 388 solo and 173 assists, 27 pass interceptions (two of which were returned for touchdowns), and 10 fumble recoveries.

He is now retired and lives in Cincinnati, Ohio with his wife Judy, their daughter Kayla and son David, both who are talented athletes. During David's career, he devoted many hours to charitable events/appearances. He remains as active as ever in charitable activities and is a strong advocate for the education and guidance of today's youth. In 2000, he started the first All Pro Sports Camp to hit Cincinnati and in 2004, he and his wife formed the David Fulcher Foundation which hosts the David Fulcher Celebrity Golf to Cure MS tournament to raise money to find a cause and cure for MS. During the NFL season, David remains active in football, working for the NFL in close relationship to the Cincinnati Bengals.
