

Dennis Hull

Dennis is the most popular after-dinner sports speaker in Canada. His brand of humour has folks doubled over with laughter whether or not they are hockey fans. Dennis lampoons his own career which was spent in the shadow of his more famous brother Bobby. However, Bobby and his Hall of Fame career, along with many other Blackhawk alumni, are the targets of many of Dennis' hysterical stories.

Dennis became an author with the publication of his book titled “Third Best Hull: I Would Have Been 4th But They Wouldn't Let My Sister Maxine Play”. Even the title of his book gives an indication of Dennis' unique sense of humour. For the record, he considers his brother Bobby and his nephew, Brett, to be superior players. However, many would argue that Dennis had the hardest and heaviest shot of the three.

Although Dennis often refers to himself as “the other Hull” in deference to his brother Bobby and his nephew Brett, Dennis had a stellar playing career himself. He debuted with the Chicago Blackhawks in 1964 and played with the team through 1977. He spent his final year with the Detroit Red Wings. Dennis scored over 300 career goals and 650 points, not bad for the “3rd best”. Dennis also played for team Canada versus the USSR in the historical 1972 Summit Series.

If your event requires a robust sense of humour and tears of laughter to make it a success, Dennis Hull is the celebrity that you need.
