

Guy McIntyre

Guy was a dominant offensive guard for the outstanding San Francisco 49ers teams of the 1980's. It was while with the 49ers that Guy won 3 Super Bowl championships (1984, 1988 & 1989). He was also named to the Pro Bowl in 5 consecutive seasons from 1989 to 1993. He is an inductee of the Georgia Sports Hall of Fame.

SF coach, legendary Bill Walsh, ever the inventor, used Guy as a blocking back / fullback in his "Elephant" short yardage formation. This was one of the first times in modern NFL history that this had been done and served as the inspiration for the Chicago Bears usage of William "Refrigerator" Perry in the same role. Following ten outstanding seasons by the Bay, Guy played one season for the Green Bay Packers in 1994 and then finished his playing career with two seasons in Philadelphia with the Eagles.

Today, Guy is considered by many to be one of the most effective youth communicators around bringing passion and deep concern to the critical issues of today. Guy's anti-drug and alcohol message challenges and leaves youth excited about their lives and their future. Much of Guy's fire is fuelled by personal experience. During his rookie season in the NFL, Guy became heavily involved in drugs and alcohol. The drugs and alcohol began affecting not only his play but his personal life. He realized he needed to make a change in his life or else he would no longer be living his dream of playing professional football. After hitting rock bottom and having nowhere to look but up, Guy dedicated his life to Jesus Christ. It was after this encounter with the Lord that he sought help from a man he trusted, Coach Bill Walsh, and admitted himself into a drug and alcohol rehabilitation facility. All this led to both a physical and spiritual transformation in his life and enabled Guy to go on and play 13 seasons in the NFL.

Guy's articulate blend of an inspirational yet practical message leaves students gripped by his message and destined for change. High school principals, teachers and counselors have responded tremendously to his presentations, which confront current issues from peer pressure to positive values, from alcohol abuse to freedom from the chemical culture and encouraging students who have made positive choices. A scholarship athlete and graduate of the University of Georgia, Guy has been playing or working for the San Francisco Forty-Niners, for more than 20 years. He is currently the 49ers Director of Alumni Relations amongst a series of various roles. Guy also serves as the headliner for the annual FCA Guy McIntyre Golf Classic Fundraiser.
