

Dick Duff

Dick Duff was nothing but a winner. His election to the Hockey Hall of Fame validates that. He won 6 Stanley Cups, played 18 NHL seasons and never played a single game in the minors. Dick started his career with the Toronto Maple Leafs and spent parts of 10 seasons- winning 2 Cups- with them being a solid scorer on a dynastic team. He was traded to the New York Rangers in 1964 and played parts of two seasons in the Big Apple and then moved on to the Montreal Canadiens where he played parts of six seasons and won 4 Cups. From Montreal, he was traded to the Los Angeles Kings in the early years of expansion and then on to the Buffalo Sabres where he finished his career.

Dick was known as the best little man in the game. He scouted for many years after his playing career ended. Dick remains one of the most likeable men in hockey.
