

Yvon Barrette

You may not recognize the name of Yvon Barrette as he didn't play in the NHL. Yet, he is one of the most popular goalies of all-time. Perhaps if the name Denis Lemieux was given, he would be recognized as the goaltender in the famous 1977 hockey movie "Slap Shot".

Fans of Slap Shot will remember the iconic scene of Denis Lemieux being interviewed by announcer Jim Carr and explaining what icing, high-sticking, slashing, hooking and spearing and demonstrating each penalty on the announcer who attempts to hide his pain.

Another famous line in the movie delivered by Barrette / Lemieux occurs when he is speaking with team management on the phone about his displeasure with the team and he is coached to blurt out "Trade me right & %$ing now!".

Today, Yvon revels in the role of Denis Lemieux and never ceases to entertain fans who meet him. If you have a crowd of hockey fans who love the cult classic movie Slap Shot, contact us to have Yvon mingle with your group.

