

Jon Warden

Jon was a member of the 1968 World Series winning Detroit Tigers. He played in the major leagues for only that one season – 1968. The left-handed pitcher had a record of 4 wins against only one loss.

Many of the funniest athletes were only marginal players. They developed their sense of humour largely by observing the wackiness around them. This is the case with Jon, just as it was with others such as Bob Uecker and Joe Garragiola. Jon had a short career and is virtually unknown to all but the most ardent baseball fan, but he is a highly sought entertainer on the banquet circuit.

Jon Warden is to the baseball comedy world what Dennis Hull is to the hockey comedy world. If you loved Dennis, you're sure to enjoy Jon.

Jon spends a lot of his time on the banquet circuit acting as Master of Ceremonies for various events. At every Detroit Tiger Fantasy Camp, Jon is the head of the Kangaroo Court, a baseball tradition. Additionally, Jon has plied his comedic stylings at "The Comedy Castle" in Royal Oak, Michigan, a popular venue for stand-up comedians. He often teams with his good friend Dave Coulier (former star of "Full House" television sit-com, comedian and impressionist). In fact, Mr. Coulier has recently developed a new television comedy series titled "Home Town" in which Jon will play a recurring character.

In summation, Jon may not be well-known for his athletic career, but his style of humour has made him an extremely popular speaker.
