

Jennifer Jones

Jennifer Jones is one of Canadian curling's most decorated and recognizable athletes. She is a five time Canadian Women's Curling Champion, and in the World Women's Curling Champion she has won a gold, a silver and a bronze medal. Most recently, she and her team won the gold medal at the Olympic games in Sochi in 2014.

Jennifer is a graduate of the University of Manitoba where she completed her Bachelor of Law Degree in 1999. When she is not curling, Jennifer works as a corporate counsel and community ambassador. She joined the media bench as a reporter for Yahoo! Sports at the Vancouver 2010 Olympics and can be seen in national television commercials.

As a natural leader with an aggressive strategy, Jennifer has changed the face of women's curling. She is known for being one of the best pressure players to ever compete in curling and best known for making "The Shot" – an extremely difficult "in-off" shot to win her first national championship. "The Shot" is labeled by many sports commentators to be the greatest shot to win a curling championship. Jennifer and her team have also made some of the most remarkable comeback victories in curling history.

Jennifer is available for corporate and charity functions. Her message focuses on how to be a leader, the importance of teamwork, having a never give up attitude and going after your dreams.
